
Whe are the biggest mule deer???

Posted by mogster - 2007/04/17 14:52

Where are the biggest muleys? Is it Old Mexico, Southern Utah, or Colorado?? I have been on some great hunts to all these places as well as Wyoming but luck just has not been with me. I am still on a quest to harvest a 180+ class buck and then my goals will go up from there. This pic is my buck from Colorado last year. It is my largest buck to date scoring 165"

=====

Re:Whe are the biggest mule deer???

Posted by Prism - 2007/04/24 00:39

I've heard there's some huge bucks up Mayfield Canyon;)

=====

Re:Whe are the biggest mule deer???

Posted by mogster - 2007/04/24 20:56

I have heard the monsters are coming from Sand Creek near Heber.. SO Prism boy where are you hunting in Colorado this year. Same as last??

=====

Re:Whe are the biggest mule deer???

Posted by bens - 2007/05/01 23:03

I know of a little honey hole. Don't know that I want to share where it is exactly, but here is some pics.

=====

Re:Whe are the biggest mule deer???

Posted by bens - 2007/05/01 23:04

I know of a spot but I don't know that I want to share where exactly that is. ;) But here is a pic.

Post edited by: bens, at: 2007/05/01 23:06

=====

Re:Where are the biggest mule deer???

Posted by Lucky 13 - 2007/12/21 17:29

The biggest deer are in the deep dark pines and if you're not willing to go in there, you won't find them!!

=====

Re:Where are the biggest mule deer???

Posted by slcmuley - 2008/01/26 18:02

where we do our general deer hunt in NE UT. there are alot of big deer holding up in the dark pines.it is really weather dependant if they will come out or not. return to the same area 3 weeks later and you will see them.2 years ago i saw 25 different bucks.1 deer was pushin 30 ended up with a 26" buck with 4 1/2" eyeguards.this year there was alot less snow and could only find younger bucks that were really easy to pattern.i knew the bigger deer were holding in the thick trees.i was finding their tracks on the edge.i knew the difficulties of hunting the thick stuff and have told myself i wouldnt hunt that way.the deadfall makes it almost impossible to be stealthy.on 2 different occasions i slipped into the trees from above following trals that i had seen good 3 1/2" tracks on.i knew the action would be fast,so with my gun in the ready position thumb on the safety i crept along moving very slow and stopping often to glass as far ahead as i could.both of the bucks i jumped i didn't see until they were up out of their beds they took one look at me and immediately put trees between us i never could get a clear shot.both of these deer were 3 year old 4 points 20-23".very frustrating and difficult with an 11 year old kid.these deer should be there waiting for us this year 1 year older and wiser.these deer were both watching their backtral but not down wind.how do i change my strategy?if the weather is different i can go back to hunting the edge. this year it is all about the kid and edge hunting will be alot easier for her.

=====

Re:Where are the biggest mule deer???

Posted by cstride - 2008/10/14 21:30

I hunt in Northern Alberta Canada. I just finished up with a Mule hunt this past weekend. In 2 days hunting we spotted over 200 mulies. Out of 200 we were in range of 14 trophy mules ranging from 160-210 BC 4 which 200 plus.Hunting was great no pressure. One buck we got with in 10yrds he would been at least 170BC. The area in question is in North West Alberta near the town of Spirt River WMU areas 359 & 526. This is a Draw area along with your buck tag you can also hunt mule does in which you can take 3. Have a look at this area.

=====